BOXED UP

Boombox—a service that fills a beautiful keepsake box with up to 150 photographs and notes from guests—commemorates special moments and well-wishes for the newlyweds. Pictures and messages are easily collected online through a shared webpage and professionally printed. Explains founder Christina Geist, “We hope to see couples reading through their Boomboxes on their anniversary, the same way many watch their wedding videos or eat a bite of frozen cake!”

TIN YEAR

Over the past decade, Kate Fujimoto has perfected the art of no-fuss productions, from intimate dinner parties to large-scale weddingscapes. “Simplicity and elegance go hand in hand, but don’t confuse that with being completely minimal,” warns the L.A.-based planner and designer. To mark her 10-year milestone, Fujimoto relaunched as Caldwell, a manifestation of her company’s growth and evolved contemporary yet feminine aesthetic. “I really wanted to keep it close to me,” she adds, noting that Caldwell was her grandmother’s maiden name. “It’s still a very personal endeavor.” CALDWELL.LA
